Clinical Interests and Accomplishments

Expanding our understanding of hypothalamic dysfunction in Fibromyalgia (FMS) and Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (CFIDS). This has allowed development of an effective treatment protocol for these diseases. The endocrine and immune dysfunction make Internal Medicine the best specialty for treating these illnesses.

Research Interests

Senior researcher on a 2001 published randomized, double blind, placebo controlled intent to treat study on a treatment protocol which was found to be effective (in a previous open trial on which I was also senior author) for treatment of CFIDS/FMS (published in 1995--see below). Our RCT protocol was developed with the assistance of major NIH and University researchers in the field. Co-authors include: Barbara Bird, Robert Greenfield, Alan Weiss, Larry Muenz and Laurie Gould. In addition, I am Medical Director of the Annapolis Research Center. We recently completed a pilot study on treatment of CFS/Fibromyalgia with Ribose and another on treating autism with a new technique. We are currently doing an RCT on treatment of CFS/Fibromyalgia with Ribose, and planning a study on metabolic therapies for infertility and on the role of iodine deficiency in breast cancer. We also funded and helped develop a highly successful study using NAET in the treatment of Autism.

Civic Activities

1991 to 1994	Founder & president of a private Annapolis day school (ABJDS) and Chairman of the fundraising committee.
1980 to present	Numerous lectures (over 100) given to the public on medical and health issues including over 200 radio and television shows and magazine articles internationally.
1995 to 1998	On rotation on hospital physician team providing free medical care at a homeless shelter.

2002 to present Founder and Trustee of the Teitelbaum Family Foundation supporting many different charitable functions.

Media-Have done many hundreds of TV (including CNN and FOX Network News) and national Radio appearances (including often being on Oprah and Friends with Dr. Mehmet Oz) and talks to the public. I am frequently quoted by many consumer publications, including USA Weekend, First for Women, Redbook, and most of the top women's glossies.

Based on my work and that of the late Dr. Janet Travell (White House physician for Presidents Kennedy and Johnson and Professor of Medicine at George Washington University Medical School) the Journal of the American Academy of Pain Management noted that "the comprehensive and aggressive metabolic approach to treatment in Teitelbaum's study is highly successful and makes FMS a very treatable disorder. The study by Dr. Teitelbaum et al. and years of clinical experience makes this approach an excellent and powerfully effective part of the standard of practice for treatment of people who suffer from FMS and MPS— both of which are common and devastating syndromes. It is very exciting that this research helps to usher in a new, more effective era in medical care."
